

Wind of Change celebrates the political changes in Eastern Europe in the late 1980ies - such as the fall of the Berlin Wall, the increasing freedom in the communist bloc (which would soon lead to the fall of the USSR), and the clearly imminent end of the Cold War. It became a worldwide hit in 1991. In 2005 the viewers of the German television network ZDF chose this song as the song of the century. It is the highest ever selling song in Germany. It is known as the song of German reunification (and fall of communism in Eastern Europe generally), even though it only rose to popularity two years later.

I..... the Moskva to Gorky Park
 Listening to the wind of change.
 An August night passing by Listening to the wind of

The is closing in.
 Did you ever
 That we could be so,
?
 The future's in the Can feel it
 I'm blowing with the of change.

..... me to the magic of the moment on a glory
 Where the children of dream away in the wind of change.

I'm walking down the Distant memories
 Are buried in the dust

 I follow the Moskva Down to Gorky Park
 to the wind of change.

Take to the magic of the moment on a glory night Where the children of tomorrow share their With and me.

The wind of change straight Into the face of a stormwind that will ring
 The freedom for peace of mind.
 Let your balaleika
 what my guitar to say.

Take me to the magic of the moment on a glory night
 Where the of tomorrow share their dream with you and me.

Take me to the magic of the moment on a glory night
 Where the children of tomorrow dream away
 in the wind of change.

follow	go along
close	near
magic	fantastic
memory	in mind
straight	not curved
face	eyes, nose, mouth etc
ring	sound of a bell
peace	no war
mind	memory, brain

The Moskva is the name of the river that runs through Moscow. Gorky Park was the name of an amusement park in Moscow. Scorpions were inspired to write this song on a visit to Moscow in 1989.