

Tony Flair was a customs officer. He worked in Backwood, a small border town in the Ballonian Mountains. There wasn't much work for Tony. It wasn't an interesting job. The road was very quiet and there were no tourists around. Just a few lorries were crossing the border. And Tony knew the drivers well. One of the drivers was Sam Dipper, an old man with a rather new and expensive lorry. He used to arrive on Friday mornings. His lorry was always empty. Tony wondered about this. He became suspicious and one day he asked Dipper about his job. Dipper laughed, and then he said, „I'm a smuggler.“ This time Tony looked very carefully at the lorry, but he didn't find anything. Tony even began to call the old man smuggler. „Hi, Mr Smuggler,“ he used to greet him. „Anything to declare?“ Sam Dipper would answer, „Don't you know that smugglers never declare anything?“ Then they both smiled.

Last year Tony retired. When he told Sam so, he answered, „Well, I think I'm going to retire as well. I made a good money by smuggling, all these years“.

When Tony was spending a few days on Babalu Island, he met Sam Dipper again. Sam stayed in a luxury hotel. He was sitting by the pool and enjoying his champagne. When Tony saw him, he walked over to him.

Tony Hello, there, Old Smuggler!

Sam Good afternoon, officer. Oh, have a drink with me. You're not on duty any more, aren't you?

Tony No, I'm not. I often searched your lorry...

Sam.... but you never found anything.

Tony No, I didn't. Can I ask you something?

Sam Of course you can.

Tony Were you really a smuggler?

Sam Of course I was.

Tony But ... the lorry was always empty. What were you smuggling?

Sam Lorries!

smuggle	transport goods illegally	expensive	high-priced	retire	give up work
lorry	truck (=Am.E.)	search	examine	on duty	working on the job
customs	duties, toll	suspicious	sceptical
border	boundary	declare	make known

TO LOOK / after / for / at / like / out / up . FIND THE SYNONYMS:

What are you .....looking for?..... (expecting to find)?

Would you ..... (examine) my car-battery, please?

One lorry ..... (resembles) the other.

..... (Be careful!) There's a lorry speeding towards us.

..... (Search for) the meanings of new words in a dictionary use an Internet source.

Jeanette has a job as a baby-sitter. She ..... (take care of) the children every weekend.

Change from WOULD to USED TO:

1. He would sit in the sun. ... He used to sit in the sun. .....
2. They would drink champagne. ....
3. She would stay in an expensive hotel. ....
4. They would make a good money. ....
5. I would stay in a luxury hotel. ....
6. He would arrive on Friday morning. ....