

It's a sunny Sunday afternoon. Hikers are walking along the stream that runs through the valley.

Suddenly, there is a rustling between the rocks. With a terrifying howl, a werewolf leaps out and jumps on the humans, who are frozen with fear. The werewolf attacks mercilessly. Only Lucy manages to escape the horrible beast.

Lucy is running for a whole hour. Then she comes to the ruins of an old castle. Lucy lies down on the damp ground. She is still trembling, but she feels sheltered by the dark walls. She finds a candle in her backpack. She places it on a flat stone next to her and adds her silver lighter.

It is midnight when she wakes up from a deep sleep. The night is as black as ink and as silent as a tomb. Lucy looks for the candle and takes it. But she cannot find the lighter. Then someone hands it to her.

Lucy whispers, "Thank you." But suddenly, she is wide awake. Has the ghastly creature followed her?

No! The werewolf had only drunk some water from the stream, then curled up and fallen into a deep sleep. It would never have occurred to that lazy beast to climb the steep path leading to the castle. For there, a ghost lived within the old walls. Even the werewolf feared that horrible ghost.

MAKE THE SENTENCES NEGATIVE:

Lucy is afraid of the ghost. ...Lucy isn't afraid of the ghost.

Lucy runs away.

Lucy thanked for the lighter.

They're walking along the stream.

Did she manage to escape?

She could find a candle.

The beast climbed the steep path.

The wolf had drunk some water.

Lucy looks for her lighter.

Were you afraid of the ghost?

Have you seen the wolf?

It's really a wolf.
