Billy lives in the country. But today he is in town.

He walks into a large department store

and looks around.

He reads some of the labels on the shelves:

NON-STICK SELLOTAPE

BATTERY POWERED BATTERY CHARGER

INFLATABLE DARTBOARD

HAND POWERED CHAINSAW

A shop assistant comes.

She looks at Billy and asks:

"Can I help you?"

Billy replies:

"No, thank you. I'm just looking around."

The shop assistant asks:

"Are you looking for anything special?

A present for your family, perhaps? Double sided playing cards?

A solar powered lighter for a friend? It's very useful, you know.

Or a gift for your wife, maybe? ...some waterproof teabags?"

Billy shakes his head:

„No, we don't need anything, actually."
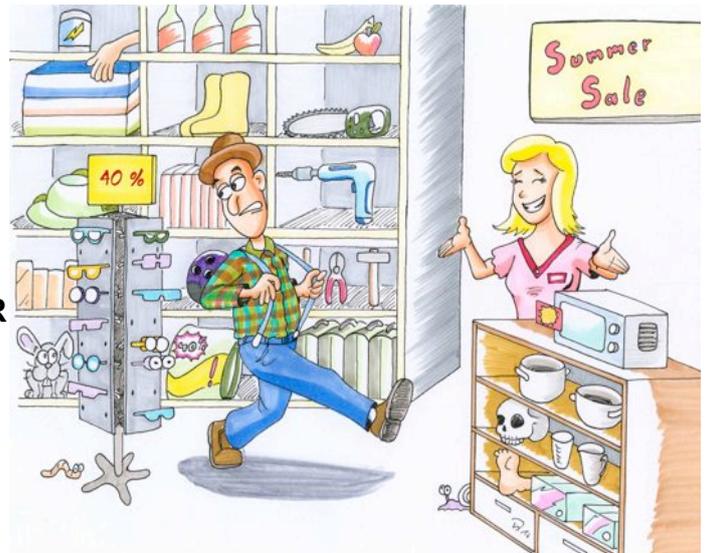

The shop assistant insists:

"Why not buy yourself a gift?

How about a silent alarm-clock?"

Billy shakes his head again.

"No, really, I don't want anything. But I must say, it's fantastic, all those things nobody needs.

Do you sell anything useful here?"

label: sticker
shelf: board
sellotape: adhesive strip inflatable: for to pump-up chainsaw: tree felling equipment
to reply: to answer
look around: look here and there lighter: device to make a flame
a gift: a present
maybe: perhaps waterproof: water-resistant
actually: really
to insist: to maintain
silent: noiseless
nobody: no one useful: helpful

SOME or ANY?
(When negation or question, use ANY)

I need ...some... batteries for the camera. – Is there .... sellotape left? - Do you sell ....

teabags? – I'm looking for ....thing. – Are there .... department stores in the country? – Can you see .... shop assistant? – Billy doesn't buy .... playing cards. – She buys ....

presents for her family. They don't sell .... useful things. Can you make ....one happy with an alarm-clock? .... of your things are very useful. Billy has .... good friends. .... darts stick in the board. Can you see .... darts on the floor?