The Man and The Snake

A man catches a snake and puts it into a basket. Then he goes to town. He sits in the street. He opens his basket. Some people come. They look at the basket. They look at the man.

The man takes a pipe and begins to play. The snake listens to the music. The snake stands up and dances this way and that way. The people give money to the man. He puts the money in his pocket. The people are happy. The man is happy. Is the snake happy?

What is it? (ocean, ~~snake~~, car, insect, flower, fruit, president, town, country, or planet?)

A cobra is ...a snake... .

A Toyota is ..... .

A rose is ..... .

Oxford is ..... .

Venus is ..... .

Donald Trump was ..... .

An apple is ..... .

A bee is ..... .

The Atlantic is ..... .

Spain is..... .

I look, she looks - I catch, she catches - I go, she goes

They look at the basket. – He …looks… at the basket.

I put the money in my pocket. She ……..the money in her pocket.

We catch a cobra. He …….. a cobra.

They listen to the music. The girl …… to the music.

The snakes dance. The cobra …… .

Do you go to India? ……..he go to India, too?

We go to Bombay. She also ……..to Bombay.

They give money to the man. The little boy ……money to the man.

When do you begin to play? When……. he begin to play?

NOTE: people = no -s, but always plural.

Some people come. The people are happy. The people have fun. We are the people.