

Today, Lucy and Hugo are visiting the museum.

They see swords, clubs, and halberds.

They don't see the "Do not touch" sign.

Hugo marvels at a knight's armour.

He tries on a helmet.

Did the knights have such small heads?

Hugo wants to squeeze his head into the helmet.

Lucy helps him. With a club!

"Ow!" screams Hugo. He wants to free himself.

Lucy thinks Hugo's tin hat is funny.

The helmet is stuck. Nothing can be done.

Hugo is furious. He must go home with the helmet.

He can only see a little of the movie.

Knights existed a thousand years ago. What didn't exist back then? Cross out the words that the knights did not yet know:

horses	cars	swords	airplanes	helmets
lances	TV-sets	castles	bridges	boats
umbrellas	radios	windows	escalators	watches
railways	bells	bread	coffee	tea
milk	sugar	newspapers	bikes	candles
wool	potatoes	silver	guns	cherries
eagles	dogs	skis	wine	photos

Which would be a possible ending of the story?

- Hugo goes to the dentist, who pulls out two of his teeth.
- Lucy manages to free Hugo from his helmet with the help of a can opener.
- The next day, his head is no longer swollen, and Hugo can remove the helmet by means of soap.
- Hugo now wears proudly a helmet for the rest of his life.
- The museum hires Hugo as a knight.
- Hugo goes to the blacksmith, who removes the helmet with a blowtorch.