

Let me tell you what happened to my uncle and aunt recently.

A young couple with a dog came to visit them. The four friends were playing cards and drinking a few glasses of red wine. The animal was a dark brown Labrador. As he was a good-natured dog, they let him run around outside.

They remembered the dog later that evening. My aunt went into the garden and saw the dog at once. He was all dirty and had a dead rabbit in his muzzle. My aunt saw that it was her neighbour's rabbit. A prize-winning pedigree rabbit!

After their initial shock, they discussed about what was to do. They decided to wash the rabbit thoroughly first. Then they took the hair dryer and dried it. My uncle then sneaked onto the neighbour's property and put the animal back in the hutch.

The next day, when my aunt was going to the shops, she met her neighbour. The woman was very excited. She told my aunt that something very strange had happened last night. Her rabbit had died three days ago. Her husband had buried it in the garden. And then, believe it or not, this morning, the animal was back in the hutch, completely clean but dead.

GIVE THE OPPOSITES:

long ago	recently
bright
bad-tempered
inside
forget
morning

clean
alive
wet
nothing
calm
day

CHANGE INTO THE PAST CONTINUOUS TENSE:

They played cards. ... They were playing cards.

The dog ran around.

My aunt went into the garden.

They discussed for a while.

He sneaked to the hutch.

She told the story to my aunt.

Did you look after your dog?

I cleaned the hutch.

Did you go to the shops?